treatment program

Smoking cessation program and tobacco outpatient treatment

Our free innovative cessation program helps many people quit any type of tobacco use, and a licensed, certified therapist leads our highly successful outpatient tobacco treatment programs. Mercy Health — REACH Services also help businesses become tobacco free and offer on-site smoking cessation programs.

Programs include collateral materials, quit kit ideas and personal journals. Free patches, gum and lozenges are also available while supplies last. Call for scheduled programs in Urbana and Springfield.

Prevention and education

Mercy Health — REACH Services provides free community programs to help others avoid alcohol, drugs and tobacco abuse. As part of our service to the community, we:

- Teach children and adults about alcohol, drugs and tobacco
- Give educational presentations for schools, churches and other organizations
- Participate at local health fairs and company programs

Detoxification

Individuals struggling with opiates or alcohol addiction can experience extreme physical discomfort when they stop using. Individuals struggling with addictions often require medical intervention to help with their recovery process. At Mercy Health — REACH Services, we provide the screening process to assist in the journey toward recovery. At the time of screening, our trained staff will assist with scheduling an admission to Mercy Health — Springfield Regional Medical Center. We strive to offer easy access to care by providing same day to next day screenings through a scheduled admission.

With individualized treatment plans and clinical guidance by our qualified, licensed professionals, people with addiction learn to address factors in their lives that contribute to their abuse of alcohol, drugs and tobacco. Details of the treatment include:
